What does your personal data mean in a nutshell?

Your personal data is any information that relates to you and on the basis of which you are a edible subject for us as a natural person. This occurs in cases where we may identify you directly or indirectly, in particular on the basis of a generally applicable identifier or other identifier, such as a name, surname, identification number, location data or online identifier, or on the basis of one or more characteristics or traits that make up your physical identity, physiological identity, genetic identity, psychological identity, mental identity, economic identity, cultural identity or social identity. This is e.g. identifying you based on a number, code or one or more elements specific to you. Personal data therefore include, in particular, the contact details of a natural person, which may include information about the use of services or about the activities and preferences of a natural person.

What personal data do we ask and collect from you?

In order to properly process your request for accommodation, we need to know the name, email address, telephone contact.

Why do we need this data?

In order to properly process your accommodation application, we need to know your contact details.

Scope of personal data

We minimize the scope of personal data we process to the extent that the quality of our services is fulfilled for you, the full fulfilment of legal obligations, and the protection of our legitimate interests.
